LOCATIONS

Lihī'i (no air base & of no military significance) 3-miles by 7-miles, 37 sq-mile, 737' highest Peak Kala

Cliff Manor (Cliff, Lihī) (termite infested piece of crap, tin roof, electrical flow over is routed into an ice machine, only one on the island, tub of ice free for the taking, only phone, internet, connection without outside, etc.)

Anna's House (Anna, Slippers, Mongooses) messy as can be

Holy Savior Church & Guest House (Father Cross, Menehunes, various visiting missionaries) immaculate, well gardened

The Grand Lihī'i Hotel (Kami, Aunti, Ninja, Pearl) 8 rooms, $500/night, indoor/outdoor bar/restaurant, only retail outlet, concierge store, etc.

Lihī'ha (a.k.a. the lowlands) (Loto, Tutu, Kane | two brothers, three sisters, seven Lani's | ? ) the village and gardens stretching from the lagoon to La'pahoehoe Point

Kala (Kala, a.k.a. Red Eye and Deacon) 737', highest point, windmill, and antenna

Pela'ku (Pe'la) 337' second peak

Mauna'pau (Mano) the highlands (not just a name), stretches between Kala and Pela'ku to the waterfall, orchard clusters, fruit trees, coffee, cocoa, pigs, pineapple gone to seed... mangosteen

Wiki'kai (Wewe...) the waterfalls 100'+ or 37' x3

Pali the valley that stretches above the waterfall into the highlands ("a point of blue under the Pali Clouds, like a ray of sunshine, sapphire blue)

Honu'kai (a.k.a. turtle cove, the lagoon) (Wewe, Ted, petal goddess) pleasant, very nice

La'pahoe Point (past the lowlands and breaker rocks a line of white caps point the way back home to Tahiti? Honolulu? This is the third volcano

Hana'ho is the cove and the reef where the waves break, nice swimming, snorkeling, or surfing on the break ("With water so blue, it'll melt your heart")

Mano's Shack (backside)

VOG brings a blood red sun
